Student Learning Outcomes

Using a combination of written music notation (scores) and aural musical examples, the students will:

1. identify and analyze phrase structure, both melodic and harmonic.
2. describe and diagram phrase development and phrase combinations, especially different types of musical periods.
3. analyze and diagram small forms.
4. analyze and distinguish between different types of theme and variation forms, especially sectional and continuous.
5. analyze and diagram binary and ternary forms.
6. analyze and diagram rondo forms, including classification by particular subtypes.
7. analyze and diagram sonata forms, with particular focus on the relationship between the exposition and the recapitulation.
8. analyze concerto grosso and concerto-sonata forms.
9. analyze basic fugal procedures.

Having developed the essential analytical skills in the preceding steps, the student will ultimately:

10. independently analyze a musical work, chosen with the teacher’s guidance, and produce a scholarly analytical project which includes both a written description of the piece and a form chart.
Graded Activity

There will be four examinations, one analysis project with paper, and frequent homework assignments based upon the lecture topics.

- The four examinations will have terms to define and musical examples (written and aural) to analyze and diagram. Make-up exams will not be given except in the event of extreme illness or emergency, and the student must provide a documented excuse. Dates for the exams are provided in the course outline.
- The analysis project will be five pages minimum (not including title page and bibliography), double-spaced, typed, 12 point Times font and one-inch margins. Outside sources must be appropriately cited using MLA format and listed in a bibliography. The five pages must include a form chart for each movement, and may also include examples of motives, themes, etc. written out to clarify your textual analysis. Illustrations should not comprise the bulk of the five pages. Four of the five pages should be text. Additional guidelines, instructions, and helpful tips will be discussed during the semester.
- Written homework assignments are assigned regularly (approximately two per week) to ensure adequate progress throughout the semester. It is important for you to complete these assignments independently to develop your analysis skills; these assignments typically form the basis of the next in-class discussion. Thus, homework assignments are due at the beginning of the next class meeting unless instructed otherwise. Late homework assignments are only accepted if the answers have not been discussed in class and, if accepted, will receive a ten-point deduction for each class meeting that they are late. You will be allowed to drop one (1) homework grade at the conclusion of the semester.
- Blackboard 9.1: I use Blackboard to post your daily homework assignments, reminders about upcoming deadlines, listening examples, and regular grade updates. Please check the Blackboard course page daily to stay up-to-date on the course information.
